Disjointed Systems for Procurement Challenge
Leader in Education
Pearson Education is a FTSE 100 company and the world’s leading education organization. With thousands of employees around the world, Pearson spends at least £2.5 billion per year on goods and services that support the business.

Pearson started with a mix of solutions for managing procurement. They had several systems, but they were disjointed and didn’t allow for a comprehensive view of spend or enforce compliance. The organization’s leaders still lacked overall business spend data and information around contracts to make strategic decisions quickly.

Pearson Chooses Coupa to Manage Their Spend
Pearson sought a single solution to improve risk management and compliance while getting better deals and channeling savings back into their organization.

They chose Coupa’s Business Spend Management platform for its user-centric nature. They wanted adoption to be easy for employees, so decision-makers could quickly realize the benefits of increased visibility.
